

DANCING WATER GODDESS

It was a long, long time ago in ancient Greece. Poseidon, lord of the sea, and Selene, goddess of the moon discovered their deep love for each other. Every month he honoured his beloved lady with a big celebration. He invited all his friends from the world of gods and all creatures of the wet element. At midnight the young gods and goddesses started the worshipping ritual with a dance. In those nights Selene travelled the sky radiant with her bright and shining golden love. Every being on land and sea was invited to take part in the healing magic of this sacred power. Thus she became the female guardian of waters.

Sometimes these days you can still see her rising from the deep with a blushing face... In Hellenic lands the reflection of moonlight on the sea is called To μονοπάτι των ερωτευμένων – To monopáti ton erotevménon - lover's path. When you're in love you feel a lightness inside that makes you want to walk on the surface and to dance upon the waves.

Only very few historians know that in some waters this old Poseidon celebration still takes place. If a human being devotes itself with a loving heart to the warm element of life in one of these magic full moon nights, the experience of floating weightlessly in unlimited energy is almost granted. On some rare and special occasions an encounter with a godlike being is very likely to happen...
